General Johnson Regards Steel Bosses Tougher Than Union Chiefs

WASHINGTON — Most of the news printed about the steel strike has pictured the union leaders as pretty difficult fellows to deal with. But in the private opinion of General Johnson, their bosses are a lot worse.

Johnson has offered compromise after compromise to the Steel Barons, only to have his offerings knocked down like nine-pins.

The first Johnson proposal was for establishment of an arbitration board similar to that set up to handle the automobile labor problem. This board consists of one representative from Labor, one from Employers and one impartial chairman named by the President.

But the Steel Barons turned thumbs down. Such a board they said was too radical. Then to demonstrate their desire to cooperate, they made a counter-proposal.

This was establishment of a board of five, two representatives of Employers, one from the A. F. of L. union, one from the company union and an impartial chairman.

In practice this meant a certain vote of three to two against organized Labor. Johnson thanked the barons for their "magnanimous co-operation" and vetoed the deal.

But the Barons refused to be discouraged. They brought forward another plan. This time it was a board of three, an impartial chairman, one representative of Employers, one to be elected by all the steel workers.

In actual practice, of course, this meant that the latter would be a company union man.

The operators knew this. Johnson knew it. So again he turned thumbs down.

The tug-of-war from then on was a bitter uphill struggle for the NRA chief. Argue and plead as he would, the Steel Barons grimly refused to budge an inch toward allowing a representative of the A. F. of L. steel union on the proposed arbitration body.

Faced by unyielding obduracy Johnson finally proposed a board of three: an impartial chairman, an employer, and a union man, but none to have any connection with the steel industry.

To this the Steel Barons finally assented. They had virtually won their point.

How It's Done

Senator George Norris knows just how his amendment to abolish the electoral college came to be defeated. He withholds the names. But this is the story:

The day the issue was to be voted on a well-known Senator came to him.

"George," he said, "I'm for your proposition. I think it is a most desirable reform, and I want to vote for it. But my colleague is against you. I don't want to embarrass him, so . . ."

"I understand," Norris said. An hour later the colleague came to him, remarked:

"Senator, I'm in a quandary. I'm for your amendment, but my colleague is not. He is up for re-election, as you know. I don't want to put him in a hot spot, so I'll have to be against you."

The amendment was lost by a two-vote margin.

Bright Future

There is one young RFC official who in the opinion of Chairman Jesse Jones has a bright future before him. Jesse's opinion is based on the following incident:

The young man was on a recent fishing trip and neither he nor Jesse had much luck.

But just as they were about to quit in disgust, Jesse landed a fair-sized fish. He was jubilantly displaying his catch, when his youthful companion hauled in a fish twice as large.

WEST SEEKS U. S. SENATE NOMINATION

Granville Man, Reported Backed by President, to File Immediately

WHITE, DONAHEY IN

Confers With Leaders Before Telling Plans

COLUMBUS, June 14. — Congressman Charles West, of Granville, today formally announced that he would become a candidate for the Democratic nomination for U. S. senator.

He said he would put his petition in circulation this afternoon and file it Friday.

When Governor George White, also a candidate for the U. S. senate, learned of West's decision he said: "It will make the race more interesting."

FOUR IN CONTEST?

West's entry makes three avowed candidates in the race, himself, White and Vic Donahey with C. V. Truax as a possible fourth.

With the deadline for filing all declarations of candidacy only one day away - 6:30 p. m., tomorrow - West flew here from Washington to make a hurried check of the state by telephone, telegraph and personal visits to points near Columbus to ascertain what degree of support he might expect from state Democratic leaders if he weighs in against White and Donahey.

He would neither deny nor affirm Washington reports that the Roosevelt administration, fearing Governor White would win the Democratic nomination and could not defeat Senator Fess in the November election, had singled West out as the candidate blessed by the White House in the hope of a Democratic victory.

CANT SPEAK FOR F. D. R.

"I cannot speak for Mr. Roosevelt or his administration," was his answer to all questions designed to forge the link between his potential senatorial candidacy and the national administration.

As soon as West arrived at Port Columbus he taxied downtown to call on his old friend Henry G. Brunner, Mansfield, formerly Democratic state chairman and now Ohio executive of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

For an hour or more he was closeted with Brunner, then emerged to tell newspapermen he had not made up his mind yet whether he would run for the senate or seek re-election to congress.

Brunner and West picked up the broken strings of their conversation at dinner at the Columbus Country Club, after which Congressman West promised newspapermen a decision one way or the other by noon today.

COLUMBUS, June 14. — Paul M. Herbert of Columbus, today filed with the secretary of state his declaration of candidacy for the office of Lieutenant Governor on the Republican ticket, subject to the primary election. His nomination petitions contained over five thousand names from fifty-two counties. Mr. Herbert said:

"The next General Assembly will face questions more critical than that of any Assembly in the history of Ohio.

"Our school system is in a state of near collapse; some of our cities verge on bankruptcy; relief to large numbers of our citizens remains urgent; millions in sorely needed capital are frozen in our State Financial Institutions; the present bode tie up between liquor and politics in an affront to decent citizens; the extravagant diversion of tax money into a state wide political machine amounts to moral bribery; Representative Government is suffering from creeping paralysis by reason of the present helplessness, leaderless and timid majority in the Assembly.

These are a few of the pressing problems that will confront the next Legislature. They must be resolutely met and solved courageously."

GERMANY HALTS DEBT PAYMENT

BERLIN, June 14. — A complete moratorium for a year on all foreign debt payments was announced today by Dr. Hjalmar, president of the Reichsbank.

Dr. Schacht warned against reprisals threatened by France and England.

EUROPE'S TWO POWERS MEET

Hitler and Mussolini in Conference in Vienna's Historic Grand Hotel.

VENICE, June 14. — Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini met today in historic Venice.

The long awaited meeting between the two strong men of Europe took place at the Venice airport immediately after the German chancellor arrived here by plane from Munich.

After cordially exchanging greetings the dictators motored to the Grand hotel, where their discussion, which may well prove to be one of the most significant conversations in European history, will be continued.

Chancellor Hitler was accompanied from Munich by his foreign minister, Baron Constantine Von Neurath.

The flight from Munich took two hours and was made without untoward incident.

Premier Mussolini was waiting at the end of the runway when Hitler's plane taxied to a stop after a graceful landing.

REWARD OFFERED IN MAN'S DEATH

Madison-Co To Give $100 For Information in Mt. Sterling Case.

LONDON, O., June 14. — Madison-co commissioners have posted $100 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the men who attacked and fatally injured Isaiah "Bud" Smith, 64, of near Mt. Sterling, on May 19 while he was spending a short time in that village.

Smith was standing in the street when several men in an automobile halted their car and attacked him, one man striking Smith on the head with a club, the blow causing his death three days later. The men escaped toward Columbus and it is believed they are residents of that city.

Mt. Sterling and Madison-co officers have uncovered several clues but have announced nothing to the public concerning their progress.

Mr. Hay has already filed his petition while Mr. Dudleson obtained his Wednesday evening and had it in circulation today. C. Edward Wright, Harrison-twp, has a petition out for commissioner on the Republican ticket.

RADCLIFF, WARD IN

Both candidates for the Democratic nomination for sheriff, Charles Radcliff, incumbent, and John G. Ward, filed their petitions with the election board Thursday. Radcliff's was presented in the morning and Ward's in the afternoon. There is no Republican candidate for this office.

Frank Anderson, Democratic candidate for treasurer, also filed Thursday.

Mrs. Marion R. Lutz also filed her petition for the Democratic nomination for recorder.

It appeared today that there may not be a candidate for coroner on either ticket unless something unexpected occurs. Dr. C. E. Bowers, a Democrat, is the incumbent, but friends said he was undecided about seeking another term. No opposition has as yet entered the field. Dr. Bowers was out of the city and was not expected home until this afternoon so a statement could not be obtained from him.

FEW COMMITTEEMEN

Democratic leaders faced considerable work today in getting committeemen lined up in the county's 38 precincts including nine in Circleville. Wednesday evening it was announced at the election board office that only five of the necessary 38 had filed petitions. It was not said how many Republican candidates for committee jobs had entered.

The county offices to be filled at the general election in November, the party candidates for which will be selected in the August primary, are:

Sheriff, clerk of courts, treasurer, auditor, recorder, prosecuting attorney, one county commissioner, judge of the common pleas court, representative in the legislature and coroner.

'HAMMEL'S TRIAL OPENS IN CHICAGO

Man Believed To Be Circleville Native Called "Psychopathic Liar."

Allen Robert Hammel, a native of Circleville, who is on trial in a Chicago court for robbing a Brinks express truck of $37,000, was expected to go on the witness stand in his own behalf today.

Called a "psychopathic liar" by Illinois psychologists, Hammel still insists that he is not the right man, but is Burt Armstrong, a New York real estate man.

The Hammel case became widely publicized when the prisoner convinced alienists in first tests that he was not lying when he claimed he was Burt Armstrong, in the face of identification as Hammel by a wife and family in Chicago.

In an opening statement to the jury yesterday, the prosecutor declared that he intended to show that after Hammel's arrest in Philadelphia, the defendant called a friend and told him, "I'm in a jam in Chicago."

CITY SCHOOL TERM HINGES ON FINANCES

Definite Decision Not Certain Until January, 1935, Claim

NEED STATE ACTION

"Suffer From Tax Limitation Slash"—May

By Pat J. Kirwin

Circleville city schools will open in September but the definite length of the school term will not be known until after January, 1935.

Salary contracts will not be offered to teachers in the city schools until the board of education learns how much money it will receive from the June collection of taxes, to be distributed in the fall.

FEW MAKE PLANS

This information was learned today following soon an announcement in Columbus by Joseph W. Fichter, assistant state director of education, that "scarcely any schools in the state have made any definite preparations to open their doors next fall because they were at a complete loss to know what their incomes will be."

Although Circleville's schools have been fortunate in the past in being able to pay their bills, the first serious financial problem will be faced in January, when most of the funds secured from the June collection of taxes will, in all probability, be used up.

The reduction of the mill limitation on real estate from 15 to 10 mills, approved by voters at the last November election, will not only affect the schools, but also the county, city and township governments, according to T. D. Krinn, deputy county auditor.

CUT TO $14.10

Circleville taxpayers were assessed $19.10 per thousand on real estate in their December and June installments, but the rate next year will be reduced to $14.10 as a result of the reduction of the mill limitation.

The schools will suffer seriously from this reduction, and according to Charles H. May, president of the board of education, the only hope is for the General Assembly to pass some revenue-raising measure.

FIELDS SURVEYED

400,000 Workers May Go on Strike Saturday

By International News Service (Copyright, 1934.)

Eleventh-hour efforts to settle the impending steel strike which would directly affect 400,000 American workers and endanger the President's economy recovery program were being frantically made today.

Hopes for settlement or delay in the strike, set for Saturday, were bright but some unforeseen circumstance may send the unionized steel workers marching from their posts, possibly provoking a serious situation from the standpoint of law and order.

FIELD SURVEYED Reports from the many strike fronts follow:

PITTSBURGH, June 14. — Silent on the Roosevelt administration's new plan for averting the threatened nation-wide steel strike, nearly 200 delegates of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers gathered here today in a special convention at Elks temple to make a final decision on the crisis.

With resolutions already passed ordering a "holiday" if demands for union recognition were not met, union leaders said the convention would discuss ways and means of carrying out the orders of the convention.

60,000 MAY SEE TITLE BOUT TONIGHT

Doubt Outcome; Both Men Ready

BY DAVIS J. WALSH
International News Service Sports Writer.

NEW YORK, June 14.—They call it a spectacle but so was the scene, millions of years ago, when men climbed down out of trees and went at each other with a club in either hand. However, times change but human nature does not and so tonight a crowd of maybe 50,000 is to clamor for a place as near as possible to an expected shambles between Primo Carnera, champion, and Max Baer, challenger, for the heavyweight championship of the world. It's a fight that took two months to make and may take a lifetime to forget. Men have already died on the ring floor before both of them.

BIG AND STRONG

That's a sanguinary view that may, in the light of later events, be quite without justification. This pair, probably the biggest and strongest that ever fought for the championship, may brawl desultorily and inanely for the complete schedule of 15 rounds. But that's not the reason the crowd has paid $25 ringside prices and a total of almost $400,000, the bumper yield of four long, haggard years.

They will expect more than action. They'll be there because they expect the principals to do great violence to one another and, frankly, these are not principals who would care to major in culture and refinement. As a matter of fact they'll kick, bite, gouge and claw. They do not like each other; anyhow, they didn't the first time they met socially. After that, it seems their repugnance rapidly ripened into something really worth while and fine.

All the rules are liable to go by default tonight, while the greatest crowd of recent years will have its fling in pre-arranged and organized assault. At 210 pounds, Baer has the potentialities of a charging water buffalo and all of its chivalry. He was a very rough, tough person when he knocked out Schmeling in his last appearance about a year ago.

As for Carnera, his more than 260 pounds have been used to advantage in recent fights, especially when he clasped the victim in a smothering embrace or stomped upon his careless feet. They say he can't punch. But when he even looks at you, it hurts.

In the midst of this profound uproar will be a comparatively little man in gray, delegated by the New York commission to call what shots he may and, in general, whoever he is, may find himself in the spot occupied by Dave Barry in the seventh round at Chicago or by Johnny Gallagher the night he stood around in a daze and let Dempsey go over Firpo like an estimate. Something undoubtedly is going to happen tonight and it probably won't rebound to the referee's credit. Altogether, I'd say that the selected official might do better if he lost his way to the arena and didn't quite make it.

The man might be Gunboat Smith because of his size but that gentleman no longer is in great favor with the commission. My guess, in fact, is that the nominee will be a man, picked largely because Ancil Hoffman, of the Baer camp, has objected to him, namely Arthur Donovan, son of old Mike, which is all right. I don't think Mike had a marcel.

Until he contracted a cold on

Sunday, Carnera looked the part of a natural, with his size, his boxing ability, his condition and the fact that he has fought three times since Baer fought once. The latter not only has been out a year but has spent most of it with his feet under a night club table. He has, in fact, played high in Hollywood and on Broadway but he must be in better than fair shape now; he can punch and don't for a moment let his buffery deceive you. When the time comes, all that banter of his runs down the middle of Main street and he's simply out for no good.

MUST WIN EARLY

Be that as it might, it would seem that he'll have to win in the early rounds or not at all. This Carnera often makes the mistake of punching with a punching fighter, particularly when hit, but if he can settle down into stride, he'll just be too hard to beat. While he's settling, however, Mr. Baer may nail him, even as he nailed Schmeling. It wouldn't be surprising if both were staggered right under the opening bell.

If that happens to Carnera, he may miss the more or less expert services of his chief second, Mr. Will Duffy, who has been unfortunately detained out of town. In Mr. Duffy's place, they hope to appoint Dan Morgan, an old line boxing man who knows more than quire, except Mr. Duffy's genius for publicizing himself. He is supposed to have influenced the result of the Dempsey-Sharkey fight by shouting to the hesitant referee in stentorian tones, "count that man!" But with the clamor and uproar of the moment, I doubt if Mr. Duffy would have been able to attract attention if he shot off a cannon. Nevertheless, Carnera is used to him, much, I suspect, as one becomes attached to an old plug hat.

But that's all such surmise at a time when activity is in the time is set, 9 o'clock tonight (Circleville time); the crowd is ready; the principals are on the scene. Carnera having arrived this morning while Baer came in from camp last night. They will weigh in this afternoon at two o'clock, an empty gesture in a heavy-weight fight but apparently a necessary one.

Briefly, the big moment is at hand. The stage is set. Curtain!

BIRDS PREPARE FOR CENTRAL OHIO DAY

COLUMBUS, June 14.—Central Ohio followers of the Columbus Red Birds who ordinarily are able to attend games at the Bird Stadium only on Saturday and Sunday are to have a "day" of their own. Saturday, June 23, has been set aside as "Central Ohio Day" by President George M. Trautman and all communities within easy driving distance of Columbus have been invited to turn out en masse.

On this date, Milwaukee will open a four game series at the Mount Street Stadium and followers of the Columbus Club are anxious to look at the mighty Brewers who have proved a nemesis to other teams in the American Association since their first squad swung into action shortly after the start of the season.

On the 23rd, besides the blanket invitation that has been issued to all towns within a radius of 75 miles, contest winners will be guests of the Red Birds from 20 nearby towns and cities. Papers in Newark, Delaware, Marysville, Chillicothe, Washington, C. H., Lancaster, Zanesville, Mt. Vernon, Mechanicsburg, Urbana, London, Westerville, Logan, Coshocton, Sunbury, Ashville, Mt. Gilead, Bucyrus and Kenton are now running sports contests with a prize of ten box seats to lucky contestants.

Still another feature planned for Central Ohio Day will be a "party" given for the Mayors and City Managers of Ohio. Mayor Henry Worley will greet these dignitaries at noon on this date and escort them to the new City Prison for luncheon. Following this, Mayors and City Managers will be guests of the Red Birds at the Milwaukee game as well as guests of the Southern Hotel that night. Other features are being planned to make their day in Columbus interesting and entertaining.

The Red Birds return home Tuesday, June 19 for continuous games through July 5.

MECCA SCORES 2 IN EIGHTH TO WIN GAME

Rally Comes After Circle City Dairy Leads Through Seven Innings.

Scoring two runs in their half of the eighth inning on three hits and a wild throw the Mecca restaurant pulled a hard-fought game from the fire, Wednesday evening, defeating the Circle City dairy, 4-3.

The Mecca retains its perfect standing in the league and meets the Container Corporation team next Tuesday for the championship of the first half.

The Mecca trailed through seven innings of the ball game with the Dairy men scoring two runs in the first and one in the second. The Mecca counted two in the third but was blanked in every other frame until the eighth came along.

The Circle City runs in the first inning were scored on clean blows by Mancin, Butler and Eldridge with one of the runs scoring as Maloney grounded out.

The second inning run came when E. Imler singled and was forced, Leasure getting to first. He advanced on Elliott's grounder and scored on Mancin's second hit.

The two Mecca runs in the third were counted on a hit by E. Radcliff who was forced by B. Radcliff. Then followed hits by Davis and Heggle to account for the runs.

LEASURE IN FORM

The Mecca had a runner left on base in the fourth inning, two in the fifth and two in the sixth but Lloyd Leasure, who pitched the best game of his career, put on the skids and with the aid of good support stopped scoring attempts.

Then came the eighth, Heggle singled and so did Kline, Heggle going to third on the latter blow and Kline taking second on the throw to third. Mettler grounded out, Imler to Baucher, Heggle scoring and Kline also scored with what proved to be the winning run when Baucher threw the ball away trying to get the runner off third base. Gordon flied out and Hickey singled but the inning was ended without further trouble.

The Circle City threatened in the ninth when Elliott was safe at first on Davis' low throw. He was forced by Mancin and Butler and Maloney were easy outs.

Davis and Gordon were hitting stars for the winners each getting three. Mancin and E. Imler each had two blows for the losers.

Umpires were J. Dade, M. Moore and Sheltman. Tonight the Given Oils and McClarren Meats tangle. Lineup and summary:

PLAN INTER CLUB MATCH

Washington C. H. Golf Team Comes Here Next Wednesday For Contest.

Next Wednesday, June 20, will be a big day at the Pickaway Country Club when the local golfers meet the Washington C. H. golfers in an inter club match.

These matches have been an annual affair and have always proven interesting.

All local members who will be able to play are asked to list their name with the caddy master, "Tink" Hill, as soon as possible.

GREER IN FORM

INDIANAPOLIS, June 14.—Another night game was on tap tonight for the Indianapolis Indians and the Columbus Red Birds, holders of third and fourth place respectively in the American Association standings.

With Ed Greer holding the Indians to four scattered hits, the Birds defeated the locals 3 to 2 in a game under the lights last night.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 14.—The last-place Toledo club in the American Association was to meet the Louisville Colonels here today. The Colonels defeated the Hens 7-1 in a night game yesterday.

And Shakespeare might have added that the quality of humor is not strained.

RANDOLPH—CLARK—LAKE—LA SALLE STREETS

About This And That

BY THE
SECOND GUESSER

OPINION WAS SOMEWHAT divided in Circleville today concerning the outcome of the Carnera-Baer fight tonight—The Second-Guesser isn't picking a winner; he'll wait until the fight's over to tell his choice.

Here are the beliefs of some of the sports-fans; we'll print them prior to the fight so there can't be any "I told you so."

Pat J. Malone, sports-man: I believe Baer will whip him although there has been so much propaganda put out about both fighters that it is difficult to know who is in condition for the fight and who isn't.

K. J. Herrmann, newspaperman: Carnera has too much weight advantage for Baer.

Otis Stonerock, hash-slinger: I like Carnera although I have a dollar to bet either way.

Fred Fissell, Hole-in-the-wall: Baer by decision.

Dorcy Courtwright, man-about-town: Carnera by a K. O.

Elliott Voll, tailor: I'd bet on Baer.

Kitty Fissell, clothier: I couldn't say.

Lawrence J. Johnson, insurance: I'll stick with the champion until he's licked.

George Roof, restaurateur: When the fight is over Baer will be the champion.

H. O. Evland, marrying squire: I pick Baer.

Frank "Pinky" Hurr, tailor: Carnera.

Bob Maloney, Sam Joseph's caddy: Max Baer.

Solly-Rabbi-Augustiner-Slough Foot McNeal, barber shop janitor: Maxie Baer and I'll bet some shoeshines on it.

Ed Wallace, the baker: Carnera not later than the ninth round.

Jack Ryan, chin-polisher: Carnera should win.

Will Hamilton, merchant—I pick Baer.

Harry Well, ex-election clerk—Carnera . . . Baer's been carrying on too much.

J. C. Rader, "Hawkshaw"—If it goes to a decision, Baer will win and if a knockout . . . It will be Carnera.

George "Bones" Hammel, license dispenser—If Baer can keep away from that Dago, he'll win . . . I believe it is a frame-up with Baer to win.

Leo White, deputy auditor—Baer will win.

Frank Goff, juvenile—If Baer can carry through some of Dempsey's stunts, he'll win.

Ray W. Davis, persecutor—I pick Carnera.
Harry Groves, persecutor—I pick Carnera.
Carnera is my man.
Troy White, big oil man—Baer.
Mary G. Morris, politician—I'd like to see Baer win.
Meeker Terwilliger, lawyer—I think Carnera will win, altho my sympathy is with Baer.
Judge C. C. Young, probate court—They say Carnera has the jitters . . . that's nice for Baer.
Judge J. W. Adkins, common pleas court—Carnera will win the fight.
Bob Armstrong, deputy—Baer for me.
George Barnes, deputy clerk—I pick Carnera.
Jake Young, Judge Adkins' caddy—The big Italian is my choice.
Virgil Brown, court house mop-per—Carnera.

War will end when those in power say "Sic 'em!" and common men say: "You started it; now finish it."

HUNT CLUBBER IN DEFIANCE

DEFIANCE, June 14.—This Ohio city, with a population of 10,000, today was divided into "war zones" with secret patrols held in readiness in each district in the hunt for a slasher-clubber who has terrorized the countryside by attacks on five women and girls.

The full man-power of the American Legion and the Lions club also was awaiting a call from a hastily organized vigilante committee of eight to launch the greatest manhunt in the history sure to assist the local communities.

The budget for the city's schools submitted last August for 1934 was $75,300.35. It will be necessary to cut it considerably for 1935 as a result of the mill reduction on real estate, Mr. Krinn said today.

In explaining that no salary contracts will be offered city teachers until the fall, Mr. May said that the "board wished to be sure of itself and not suffer an embarrassment as a result of miscalculation."

BUDGET STUDIED

On or before July 15, the board must submit its 1935 budget to the county auditor, who draws up a budget for the county for submission to the county commissioners.

Money secured from the June collection of taxes distributed in the fall usually runs the schools through January and sometimes longer. After January, funds received from the collection of the personal, tangible and classified taxes add to the school treasury. These, however, are not expected to yield enough to operate the schools for a nine-month term.

Mr. Krinn does not believe that the schools will be able to operate nine months if some outside help is not furnished.

OTHERS LISTED

Besides Circleville, among the cities planning to open their schools without any definite length of school term specified, and without any salary contracts for teachers, are Portsmouth, Jackson, Nelsonville, Hillsboro, Marysville, Coshocton and New Lexington.

Schools planning to open on a "month-by-month" basis include Bexley, Chillicothe, Washington C. H. and Wilmington.

Mansfield has been cited by state officials as one of the cities whose schools are assured of operating no more than five months. Athens and Wooster will open on a four-month basis, while Bellaire will put its teachers to work on "courtesy contracts," which state what salary will be paid "if and when" the schools operate.

WOODS SHOW HERE FRIDAY

Two Performances Scheduled For Unique Presentation; Acts Lauded.

When the all new Bryan Woods circus visits Circleville on Friday, June 15, amusement lovers will see a novel presentation of tented recreation. None other than Ohio's well known circus man, John G. Robinson the Third, early this spring in Miami, Fla., described the Bryan Woods show as "The only really new idea in circus business in 50 years."

And that is why the Bryan Woods show, have come to be known as "The only show of its kind in America." A self cooling tent that need hold no terror for circus fans on the hottest of days is one of the novel features. For those who visit the circus in the evening, the best lighted circus performance ever offered is promised, one which aside from the usual overhead lights every nook and corner of the big tent is reached by searching spot lights.

But the circus performance itself is what will most interest the majority, and in this respect it is almost needless to say that every branch of the circus that has become orthodox is represented in the program, which includes leapers, acrobats, tumblers, wire walkers, bareback riders, high divers, a loop-the-loop in an automobile, funny clown turns for the children (and the grown-ups who chaperon them), trapeze performers, and all the usual, and many unusual circus turns.

Miss Billie Woods, best known of the world's lady trainers of simians, directs the activities of a half hundred monkeys, apes, baboons and chimpanzees, while another well known animal trainer, Miss Dorothy Lewis, has charge of a division made up of dogs and ponies.

Two performances will be given, rain or shine, at 2:15 and 8:15 p. m.

HOLLYWOOD COMES TO THE CLIFTONA FRIDAY, THIS WEEK

Hollywood is coming to Circleville!

Although that may sound like a broad statement, it is, save for perhaps slight exaggeration, the truth, for on Friday, June 15, the far famed Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Traveling Motion Picture Studio will pay the Cliftona theatre a brief visit.

This traveling studio, which was designed and constructed to special specifications at a cost of $150,000, is literally a miniature Hollywood on wheels; what with its elaborate motion picture sound equipment, its cameras, and its expert crew of camera and sound men from the famous Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios in California.

Facilities for both the taking and the projection of talking motion pictures are included aboard the studio, and realizing that the general public would be greatly interested in having an opportunity to inspect this equipment, it is announced that during the studio's visit here this will be permitted.

The studio, which is hauled by a gigantic trackless locomotive, truly an amazing sight in itself, is regarded as one of the most remarkable and noteworthy achievements in engineering yet attempted successfully by the resourceful mind of man. Everywhere the studio travels it is referred to as the "Eighth Wonder of the World."

STUDEBAKERS IN FLEET

The M-G-M traveling motion picture studio which will arrive in Circleville at 1:30 tomorrow afternoon and open to the public for inspection from that time until 3 p. m., is equipped entirely with Studebaker automobiles, according to G. L. Schlear, local Studebaker dealer. The studio is a trailer attached to a specially constructed auto, resembling a locomotive engine, but powered by a Studebaker motor.

All other cars in the caravan are also products of the Studebaker Corporation and a special feature will be an 85 per cent stock Studebaker which performed in the Memorial Day races at Indianapolis. The racing car is being piloted by David R. Osborne, Junior.

WASH OUT 15 MILES OF KIDNEY TUBES

Win Back Pep... Vigor... Vitality

Medical authorities agree that your kidneys contain 15 MILES of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy.

If you have trouble with too frequent bladder passages with scanty amount causing burning and discomfort, the 15 MILES of kidney tubes need washing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and vitality, getting up nights, lumbago, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.

If kidneys don't empty 3 times every day and get rid of 4 pounds of waste matter, your body will take up these poisons causing serious trouble. It may knock you out and lay you up for many months. Don't wait a doctor's prescription... which has been used successfully by millions of kidney sufferers for over 40 years. They give quick relief and will help you wash out the 15 MILES of kidney tubes.

But don't take chances with strong drugs or so-called "kidney cures" that claim to fix you up in 15 minutes, for they may seriously injure and irritate delicate tissues. Insist on DOAN'S PILLS... the old reliable relief that contains no "dope" or habit-forming drugs. Be sure you get DOAN'S PILLS at your druggist. © 1934, Foster-McLiburn Co.

TRACKLESS TRAIN IN CITY FRIDAY

Something unusual in the way of vehicles, a trackless train comprised of a locomotive and passenger coach, is scheduled to visit Circleville, Friday, June 15, it was announced today by H. B. Given, local United States tire dealer.

"This unusual mode of transportation is well worth inspecting. In addition to possessing the fascinating features of a giant monster of the rails, it is also equipped with broadcasting apparatus over which several broadcasts will be made."

"Several years ago the first trackless train was built for the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Motion Picture Company which sent it on a world tour. The tour was so successful and the train aroused so much attention that a second train was built recently by the same company.

"As a result of the satisfactory service which United States tires gave during the tour of the first trackless train, they are being used exclusively in the current tour by the second train. Fourteen U. S. Royal Shock Ply casings with Puncture Sealing Tubes are used. (The locomotive requires size 34x7 and the coach 32x8.)"

The Flag and the Citizen

FLAG Day for the patriotic American citizen involves no thought of the origin of America's revered symbol of nationality. Researches to establish the relation of the stars to the Washington coat of arms and the stripes to another heraldic source are coldly academic. The results mean practically nothing to the citizen who uncovers to the Stars and Stripes because it is the visible emblem of his country, its Government, greatness, privileges and power.

For him the flag signifies peace, freedom and opportunity for everyone to strive for the objective in life to which his ambition aspires, and which, if his talents qualify him, he may attain without let or hindrance from political or social inhibitions. Beyond a doubt the most joyous thrill of Americans abroad is not from any scenic, historical monument, beautiful sculpture or painting, ancient cathedral or legendary castle, but from an unexpected glimpse of the Star Spangled Banner. For this fluttering symbol signifies home, and that home is America. It carries the message of protection for the individual in whose ever part of the world he may find himself.

Americans have lived to see the hopes of all the nations concentrated on the visible emblem of what free government has done for the hundreds of millions who have lived under its folds that guarantee life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness as inalienable rights. Loyalty to the flag takes the place in America that loyalty to the king did in the days of divine right. This emotion is a valuable asset of Americans. It unifies the people, irrespective of party, faction or racial origin, and the fact that the foreign-born citizen vies with the native in his reverence for the flag is incidental to its unification of a hundred and twenty millions of people in the continental area.

And yet, if all laws ever passed were still in force, all of us would be in jail.

The Boy Scouts

MEMBERSHIP and finances are not the major items of interest in connection with the Boy Scouts of America, the twenty-fourth annual meeting of which organization was held the other day in Buffalo, N. Y. They nevertheless, do throw important light on a movement which is accomplishing tremendous good among American boys.

The organization now has more than 1,000,000 members, the annual report showed. Nearly a quarter of a million men are engaged as scoutmasters in directing their activities. Despite the depression, the organization was shown to be in a sound financial condition, the income last year being approximately $750,000.

The primary importance of the organization lies in the value to the scouts themselves of the training they receive in things, that will make them good citizens. But it is a tenet of their order also to be of help to others, and instances of how they do this are numerous in every community where there is a scout organization. Last year, in response to a request from President Roosevelt, the scouts took an active part in relief work, among the results being the collection of 11,000,000 articles of clothing and other articles for distribution among the needy.

The United States has just reason to feel proud of its scout organization and of the steady growth it is experiencing.

If a man should do nothing that hurts him, as the doctors say, think how the collection plates would suffer.

Among those who have signed up to make voluntary reduction of the cotton crops are Mr. Boll Weevil.

CHAPTER FORTY-SEVEN

"I think I'll go and see Dr. Baker, Val, you know, the doctor we had for John Harmon. I think I'll go tonight—he has office hours every evening."

Stanley slid off the bed, stood up a bit shakily. It was still hot in the room but the sunlight had been blotted out by a thick, warm dusk.

Valerie accepted this casually but later she said: "Want me to go with you, darling, for moral support and what-not?"

Stanley was drawing a lipstick carefully across her mouth. Now she rubbed her lips gently, shook her head. "No, thanks, Val. I'll be all right. It's just around the corner in an apartment hotel. I went there one night for some medicine."

After she had gone, Valerie sat for a long time in the wing chair frowning thoughtfully. She had not forced any confidences but she thought she knew pretty well what had happened to Stanley in the past three weeks. She wished that John Harmon was home, that Drew Armistage had never left Chicago and that Perry had not gone off to Canada on his annual fishing trip. She felt that Perry would have helped tremendously just then; that he would have made certain things seem much less unbearable, the weather, for instance, and the look that had been in Stanley's eyes just now, and the stillness and heartache she had somehow managed to leave behind her in this old room.

A nurse admitted Stanley and took her name and address and said that the doctor would see her in just a few minutes. Then she left her and went back through a white paneled door.

The room was small but miraculously cool. There were slim maple chairs and one or two deeper, cushioned chairs, and a maple table with a gay litter of magazines. There was a faint smell of ether and antiseptics and a general air of well-ordered expectancy about the place. Stanley found herself thinking that in this pleasant, calm atmosphere nothing seemed so very bad. She might have been waiting for a manicure or a facial or something equally unimportant. She picked up a New Yorker and turned its pages—hats were wearing brims again, enchanting ones, this season; there was a new perfume "as intriguing and mysterious as moonlight"; gloves were going to be very important, soft, wrinkled, suede gloves—

Her hands were trembling so that the magazine shook ridiculously. She put it back on the table, sat staring at the closed white door. She tried to think about casual, impersonal things; whether the doctor was really busy or was just having his dinner or was perhaps finishing a good detective story. She remembered him as being a young man with friendly eyes and a pleasant, informal manner. He and John Harmon had got on splendidly. He had been interested in John Harmon's novel, had said he would bring a copy around to be autographed.

For a moment she wondered a bit apprehensively if it mightn't have been better to have gone to a stranger—someone to whom she would have been just a name—but she dismissed this almost at once. He had had friendly brown eyes and had laughed a lot; had been efficient without appearing to be. He would know exactly what to do and would make it all seem not too important—as he had made John Harmon's temperature and the frightening way in which he had raved deliriously seem not too important.

The nurse came back most unexpectedly, and the next minute Stanley had gone through the white door and was shaking hands with Dr. Baker.

He was glad to see her. He told her so and asked about John Harmon. She told him John Harmon was abroad. He was delighted. And then, putting her in a deep chair opposite him, he sat down at his desk, the nurse went out, closing the door softly behind her, and he said to Stanley, in the same wholly unprofessional tone that somehow contrived at the same time to be a bit different than it had been before: "And what can I do for you, Mrs. Northrup?"

Stanley looked at him and locked her hands together tightly and moistened her lips. "I think I am going to have a baby."

His smile which had been a bit tentative, became at once expansive. "Fine. That's the best piece of news I ever hear in this office. We'll have to take good care of you now, until that clever husband of yours returns."

Stanley stared at him, twisted her fingers together, opened her lips to speak. But he was asking her questions, brief, rather simple questions. She answered them mechanically.

He rang for the nurse and said something about an "examination."

When it was over and she had come back again to the deep chair, he smiled at her reassuringly. "Everything's fine, Mrs. Northrup. Not a thing in the world to worry about. Now just forget all about it for, say, a month, then come back and see me again. If you could get away from the city for a while it might do you good. A change is sometimes the best cure for the morning nausea, but that will pass away, in a few weeks more—you're probably through the worst of it now. And if there's anything you want in the meantime, just call me up or come in and see me."

"But, doctor—" Stanley wasn't just sure what she was going to say. Nothing much, she thought, somehow, everything seemed to be settled all at once.

But he interpreted her half-formed question from force of habit. "There will be plenty of time to settle details later—hospital, nurse, all that sort of thing—it's hard to be definite so early about these things, but I should say we can safely count on your being confined in December. The thing for you to do now is forget all about it and just take care of yourself. Later on you can get excited about the baby. Right now I want you to forget it and think of yourself."

She smiled because he expected her to, shook hands with him and followed the nurse out.

The nurse shook hands with her too, and smiled at her. "I'm sure you're going to be fine, Mrs. Northrup, and you'll feel much better in another month. They say the second month's always the worst. And Dr. Baker will take fine care of you—he's wonderful with confinement cases. I tell him he ought to specialize in them."

Stanley walked out of the apartment building and started home. She was going to have a baby. There was no longer any question about that. She was going to have a baby. Dr. Baker had taken it for granted and the nurse had taken it for granted. Stanley found that she, too, was accepting it; calmly, without rebellion, with, indeed, a rather pleasant sense of inevitability. She walked rapidly and easily with a nice feeling of release from physical pain. Her head no longer ached, she was, in fact, not conscious of her body at all. Something was happening to her; a numbness was slipping away from her. She no longer felt empty, apathetic, bereft of every vital impulse.

In the time it took her to leave the doctor's office and walk two blocks through a soft, hot dark night she discovered that somehow she had come back from a meaningless void into a world of pulsing, fierce reality.

She saw things all at once with an amazing clarity. It was as if she had been staring into a pool of stagnant, clouded water, in which nothing was capable of reflection, and then miraculously the water had cleared, had become smooth and limpid and shining, with simple, clean-cut reflections, she saw herself, suddenly and irrevocably, as Stanley Northrup, not as Stanley Paige who had desired Drew Armistage and, lacking the courage of her desires, had sent him away, not as Stanley Paige who had loved John Harmon and married him and then forgotten him so completely—but as Stanley Northrup, a very real and not particularly romantic person who was going to have a baby—and there was something supremely ridiculous and absurd in the idea that she could ever have forgotten John Harmon—a person who was going to have a baby did not think of another man, most certainly did not forget the man whose baby she was going to have. She didn't know exactly why this was so, she didn't care particularly; that it was so was all that mattered and that mattered tremendously.

And that it was so simplified things amazingly. There was no longer any question of her wanting Drew—Drew belonged very definitely to a slender, ardent-eyed, trembling-lipped girl who had lived in a fool's paradise and had never even thought of having a baby; there was no longer any question of her not wanting John Harmon—John Harmon was all that really mattered in the past, he was what so utterly emphasized the future, he was what so completely accentuated the present, only, curiously enough, there were two of him: now—one, ridiculously tall and thin and rumpled-headed, the other ridiculously small and round and rumpled-headed.

Stanley had reached her own block. Now she quickened her walk, ran up the steps of the house and turned the key in her own door. Then she remembered suddenly that babies weren't supposed to have much hair—not at first, anyway. She pushed open the door, found Valerie still curled up in the wing chair, told her in a breathless, rather hushed voice: "I'm quite sure my baby will have hair, Val—soft, rumply, brown hair."

A few nights later Perry, back from his fishing trip, dropped in at the house on Ninth Street. He found Valerie clad in her scarlet pajamas, her hair clinging in damp little rings about her forehead, her hands covered with soapuds.

"Stanley's not here," she told him, emerging from the bathroom, "and I'm in the midst of the family wash, but I'll be finished in a second if you want to wait."

Perry wanted to wait. He slung his hat onto a convenient table and sat down on the divan and lighted a cigarette. A faint breeze drifted in through the open windows and stirred the chintz curtains and the leaves of the primroses and potted geraniums. The night was warm and pregnant with the promise of rain—tender, springlike rain—and somewhere a hurdy-gurdy jangled a wistful, thin little tune.

"Where's Stanley?" he asked, tipping his head back, lifting his voice above the noise of running water in the bathroom.

"She's gone over to Newark. She said if you showed up to tell you that she had gone to see Ellen—that you would know who Ellen was." Valerie appeared again, drying her hands on a Turkish towel. She curled up on the other end of the divan. In the soft glow of the yellow-shaded lamp she looked slim and young and a little tired and entirely lovely.

Painful Neuralgia Due To Nerve Inflammation

If Neglected There Is Danger That This Condition May Become Chronic, Says Authority

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health,
New York City

"TRIGEMINAL NEURALGIA," or neuralgia of the face, as it is more commonly called, is an extremely painful and annoying affliction. The symptoms are due to an inflammation or other disturbance of the trigeminal nerves.

The French call this condition "le douloureux," which means "agonizing twitch." I am confident that every sufferer from trigeminal neuralgia will agree that the French description is very precise.

There are two trigeminal nerves, one on each side of the face. When these nerves become inflamed, pain radiates along their course. The pain may be so severe as to require for its relief opiates or other strong sedatives.

As a rule the victim first complains of pain in the face, or earache. The pain "comes and goes," but with each new attack it becomes more severe and even agonizing. Any pain located in the face that is throbbing or shooting in character and which is felt intermittently, should arouse suspicion of trigeminal neuralgia.

Should Not Be Neglected

It should never be overlooked for if allowed to become chronic, cure is difficult. For many years little relief could be offered to victims of this disturbance. The disease was not understood and many unconfirmed opinions were given as to the cause and possible cure. I am glad to say that sufferers from this affliction can now obtain relief and may even hope for a definite cure.

In most instances the disturbance can be traced to an infection somewhere in the body. For example, diseased teeth, nasal sinuses or tonsils, disease of the gall bladder or other part of the digestive tract, may be the underlying cause. When the original trouble is corrected and all centers of infection are removed, the attacks are lessened in number and severity and in many instances complete relief is obtained.

"Injection Treatment"

Within recent years a new method has been devised for the relief of severe cases of trigeminal neuralgia. I refer to the so-called "injection treatment." Alcohol or another chemical is injected into the involved nerve. This leads to a numbness of the diseased nerve and the disappearance of the unbearable pain.

Of course, only the attending physician can determine whether this is the correct treatment. Such measures are unnecessary when focal points of infection are removed.

If you are a sufferer from trigeminal neuralgia I urge you to consult with your physician. Perhaps he will advise an X-ray examination of the teeth and nasal sinuses. If they are diseased proper measures will be taken for the removal of pus and infection.

In addition, he will give attention to the digestive tract. Faulty elimination must be corrected before permanent relief can be expected. To this end diet is of the greatest importance.

MOVIES

AT THE CLIFTONA

Telling the intimate story of the life of a world famous dancer, George Raft's latest starring picture for Paramount, "Boleyn," comes on Friday and Saturday to the Cliftona Theatre. The picture, directed by Wesley Ruggles, features Carole Lombard, Sally Rand, the Fan Dancer, and Frances Drake.

It reveals the long struggle for success by an ambitious youth, who finally achieves fame only by denying his emotions, by trampling on the hearts of the beautiful women who help him on his way to the top.

George Raft, who himself, was an internationally famous dancer before he came to the screen, plays the lead. In the supporting cast are the blonde beauty of Carole Lombard, as the only woman he loves, Sally Rand, whose startling fan-dance is recorded in the picture. Frances Drake, as one of his partners, and William Frawley, who plays the role of his brother-manager.

AGLESION TO HEAD PRESBYTERIAN MEN
A most enjoyable evening was spent by the Men's Club of the Presbyterian Church at its monthly meeting Tuesday night. Prof. E. K. Povenmire gave an interesting insight on Shakespeare as a playwright.
Two of his high school pupils in dramatics, Miss Lydia Given and Horace Gilmore gave the Dager scene from Macbeth.
Several of the members read selections: E. A. Brown, "Hamlet's Soliloquy"; G. E. Hammel, Marc Antony's eulogy on "Julius Caesar"; then Col. C. E. Groce recited from memory—"The Seven Vile Plagues of Egypt."
The evening closed with a prayer by the pastor, Rev. J. O. Eagleson.

STEEL STRIFE

issued by leaders of the steel industry revealed today.

During an all-day session of the executive committee of the American Iron and Steel Institute, the committee consolidated returns from elections held by employees since the strike issue was raised.

85 PER CENT OPPOSED

The compilations showed that of 213,044 employees eligible to vote in 34 steel plants, 85 per cent were cast by 181,926 or 85.39 per cent.

GARY, Ind., June 14.—A compromise proposal that may avert the threatened steel strike in the Calumet district here was being borne to the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers convention at Pittsburgh today.

Before departing by airplane for the convention Roy A. Kelsey, secretary of the union's fourth district, declared:

"We think we have terms which might be acceptable to both the union and to the industry."

WASHINGTON, June 14.—Administration leaders in Congress today sought an agreement for immediate enactment of President Roosevelt's new labor bill in order to use its conciliating features to avert a strike in the steel industry.

While delegates of the steel workers union met in Pittsburgh to vote on a general strike, the Republican membership of the Senate met in party conference to chart their course on the bill. The administration plans to secure Senate approval of the measure before sending it to the House.

The bill would:

1. Empower the President to appoint boards to investigate labor disputes and encourage their settlement. The actual settlement however would be left to direct negotiations between employers and employees.
2. Direct these boards to conduct secret elections among employees in any industry either on the issue of organization or on the choice of representatives in collective bargaining, as defined in section 7-A of the National Recovery Act.
3. Impose a fine of $1,000 or a year's imprisonment on any person violating any rule laid down by the conciliation boards or interfering with their operations.

General Johnson Regards Steel Bosses Tougher Than Union Chiefs

WASHINGTON — Most of the news printed about the steel strike has pictured the union leaders as pretty difficult fellows to deal with. But the private opinion of General Johnson, their bosses, are a lot worse.

Johnson has offered compromise after compromise to the Steel Barons, only to have his offerings knocked down like nine-pins.

The first Johnson proposal was for establishment of an arbitration board similar to that set up to handle the automobile labor problem. This board consists of one representative from Labor, one from Employers and one impartial chairman named by the President.

But the Steel Barons turned thumbs down. Such a board they said was too radical. Then to demonstrate their desire to cooperate, they made a counter-proposal.

This was establishment of a board of five, two representatives of Employers, one from the A. F. of L. union, one from the company union and an impartial chairman.

In practice this meant a certain vote of three to two against organized Labor. Johnson thanked the barons for their "magnanimous co-operation" and vetoed the deal.

But the Barons refused to be discouraged. They brought forward another plan. This time it was a board of three, an impartial chairman, one representative of Employers, one to be elected by all the steel workers.

In actual practice, of course, this meant that the latter would be a company union man. The operators knew this. Johnson knew it. So again he turned thumbs down.

The tug-of-war from then on was a bitter uphill struggle for the NRA chief. Argue and plead as he would, the Steel Barons crinily refused to budge an inch toward allowing a representative of the A. F. of L. steel union on the proposed arbitration body.

Faced by unyielding obduracy Johnson finally proposed a board of three: an impartial chairman, an employer, and a union man, but none to have any connection with the steel industry.

To this the Steel Barons finally assented. They had virtually won their point.

How It's Done

Senator George Norris knows just how his amendment to abolish the electoral college came to be defeated. He withholds the names. But this is the story:

The day the issue was to be voted on a well-known Senator came to him.

"George," he said, "I'm for your proposition. I think it is a most desirable reform, and I want to vote for it. But my colleague is against you. I don't want to embarrass him, so I..."

"I understand," Norris said. An hour later the colleague came to him, remarked:

"Senator, I'm in a quandary. I'm for your amendment, but my colleague is not. He is up for re-election, as you know. I don't want to put him in a hot spot, so I'll have to be against you."

The amendment was lost by a two-vote margin.

Bright Future

There is one young RFC official who in the opinion of Chairman Jesse Jones has a bright future before him. Jesse's opinion is based on the following incident:

The young man was on a recent fishing trip and neither he nor Jesse had much luck.

But just as they were about to quit in disgust, Jesse landed a fair-sized fish. He was jubilantly displaying his catch, when his youthful companion hauled in a fish twice as large.

WEST SEEKS U. S. SENATE NOMINATION

Granville Man, Reported Backed by President, to File Immediately

WHITE, DONAHEY IN Confers With Leaders Before Telling Plans

COLUMBUS, June 14. — Congressman Charles West, of Granville, today formally announced that he would become a candidate for the Democratic nomination for U. S. senator.

He said he would put his petition in circulation this afternoon and file it Friday.

When Governor George White, also a candidate for the U. S. senate, learned of West's decision he said: "It will make the race more interesting."

FOUR IN CONTEST? West's entry makes three avowed candidates in the race, himself, White and Vic Donahey with C. V. Truax as a possible fourth.

With the deadline for filing all declarations of candidacy only one day away - 6:30 p. m. tomorrow - West flew here from Washington to make a hurried check of the state by telephone, telegraph and personal visits to points near Columbus to ascertain what degree of support he might expect from state Democratic leaders if he weighs in against White and Donahey.

He would neither deny nor affirm Washington reports that the Roosevelt administration, fearing Governor White would win the Democratic nomination and would not defeat Senator Fess in the November election, had singled West out as the candidate blessed by the White House in the hope of a Democratic victory.

CAN'T SPEAK FOR F. D. R. "I cannot speak for Mr. Roosevelt or his administration," was his answer to all questions designed to forge the link between his potential senatorial candidacy and the national administration.

As soon as West arrived at Port Columbus he taxied down town to call on his old friend Henry G. Brunner, Mansfield, formerly Democratic state chairman and now Ohio executive of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

For an hour or more he was closeted with Brunner, then emerged to tell newspapermen he had not made up his mind yet whether he would run for the senate or seek re-election to congress.

Brunner and West picked up the broken slivers of their conversation at a dinner at the Columbus Country Club, after which Congressman West promised newspapermen a decision one way or the other by noon today.

COLUMBUS, June 14. — Paul M. Herbert of Columbus, today filed with the secretary of state his declaration of candidacy for the office of Lieutenant Governor on the Republican ticket, subject to the primary election.

His nomination contained over five thousand names from fifty-two counties. Mr. Herbert said:

"The next General Assembly will face questions more critical than that of any Assembly in the history of Ohio.

"Our school system is in a state of near collapse; some of our cities verge on bankruptcy; relief to large numbers of our citizens remains urgent; millions in sorely needed capital are frozen in our State Financial Institutions; the present hold tie up between liquor and politics in an effort to decent citizens; the extravagant diversion of tax money into a state wide political machine amounts to moral bribery; Representative Government is suffering from creeping paralysis by reason of the present helplessness, leaderless and timid majority in the Assembly.

These are a few of the pressing problems that will confront the next Legislature. They must be resolutely met and solved courageously."

GERMANY HALTS DEBT PAYMENT

BERLIN, June 14. — A complete moratorium for a year on all foreign debt payments was announced today by Dr. Hjalmar, president of the Reichsbank.

The moratorium will expire June 30, 1935, and applies to Young and Dawes plan loans.

Dr. Schacht warned against reprisals threatened by France and England.

Patty Owens, E. Corwin-st, is spending this week with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Neil Walker of Chillicothe.

CITY SCHOOL TERM HINGES ON FINANCES

Definite Decision Not Certain Until January, 1935, Claim

NEED STATE ACTION

"Suffer From Tax Limitation Slash"—May

By Pat J. Kirwin

Circleville city schools will open in September but the definite length of the school term will not be known until after January, 1935.

Salary contracts will not be offered to teachers in the city schools until the board of education learns how much money it will receive from the June collection of taxes, to be distributed in the fall.

FEW MAKE PLANS

This information was learned today following soon an announcement in Columbus by Joseph W. Fichter, assistant state director of education, that "scarcely any schools in the state have made any definite preparations to open their doors next fall because they were at a complete loss to know what their incomes will be."

Although Circleville's schools have been fortunate in the past in being able to pay their bills, the first serious financial problem will be faced in January, when most of the funds secured from the June collection of taxes will, in all probability, be used up.

The reduction of the mill limitation on real estate from 15 to 10 mills approved by voters at the last November election, will not only affect the schools, but also the county, city and township governments, according to T. D. Krinn, deputy county auditor.

CUT TO $14.10

Circleville taxpayers were assessed $19.10 per thousand on real estate in their December and June installments, but the rate next year will be reduced to $14.10 as a result of the reduction of the mill limitation.

The schools will suffer seriously from this reduction, and according to Charles H. May, president of the board of education, the only hope is for the General Assembly to pass some revenue-raising measure.

100,000 Workers May Go on Strike Saturday

By International News Service (Copyright, 1934.)

Eleventh-hour efforts to settle the impending steel strike which would directly affect 400,000 American workers and end the President's economy recovery program were being frantically made today.

Hopes for settlement or delay in the strike, set for Saturday, were bright but some unforeseen circumstance may send the unionized steel workers marching on their posts, possibly provoking a serious situation from the standpoint of law and order.

FIELD SURVEYED

Reports from the many steel fronts follow:

PITTSBURGH, June 14. — Chief on the Roosevelt administration's new plan for averting the threatened nation-wide steel strike, nearly 200 delegates of the Associated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers gathered today in a special convention at Elks temple to make a final decision on the crisis.

With resolutions passed ordering a strike, the delegates met for union recognition and a convention would carry out the orders of the convention.

NEW YORK, June 14. — More than 85 per cent of the members of the major steel companies met today to vote against a strike and in favor of continuation of the so-called "company unions," a statement.

The flag should not be used upon an automobile except when in such a position that it floats free from the body of the car.

The field of stars should occupy the honor position at the flag's right, or the observer's left.

The flag should be removed before torn or weatherworn.

10,000 MAY SEE TITLE BOUT TONIGHT

Doubt Outcome; Both Men Ready

BY DAVIS J. WALSH
International News Service Sports Writer

NEW YORK, June 14.—They all had a good idea of what was in store for them when they climbed down out of trees and went to the ring to fight. They knew that each other with a club in either hand. However, times change but human nature does not and so tonight a crowd of maybe 50,000 is to clamor for places as near as possible to an expected shambles between Primo Carnera, champion, and Max Baer, challenger, for the heavyweight championship of the world. It is a fight that took two months to make and may take a lifetime to forget. Men have already died on the ring floor before both of them.

BIG AND STRONG

That's a sanguinary view that may, in the light of later events, be quite without justification. This pair, probably the biggest and strongest that ever fought for the championship, may brawl savagely and manfully for the complete schedule of 15 rounds. But that's not the reason the crowd has paid $25 ringside prices and a total of almost $400,000, the bumper yield of four long, haggard years. They will expect more than that. They'll be there because they expect the principals to do great violence to one another and, frankly, these are not principals who will care to major in culture and refinement. As a matter of fact, they'll kick, bite, gouge and claw. They do not like each other, anyhow, they didn't the first time they met socially. After that, it seems their repugnance rapidly ripened into something really worth while and fine.

All the rules are liable to go by default tonight, while the greatest crowd of recent years will have its fling in pre-arranged and organized assault. At 210 pounds, Baer has the potentialities of a charging water buffalo and all of its chivalry. He was a very rough, tough person when he knocked out Schmeling in his last appearance about a year ago.

As for Carnera, his more than 260 pounds have been used to advantage in recent fights, especially when he clasped the victim in a smothering embrace or stomped upon his careless feet. They say he can't punch. But when he even looks at you, it hurts.

In the midst of this profound uproar will be a comparatively little man in gray, delegated by the New York commission to call what shots he may and, in general, enforce order. This official, whoever he is, may find himself in the spot occupied by Dave Barry in the seventh round at Chicago or by Johnny Gallagher the night he stood around in a daze and let Dempsey go over. Firpo like an estimate. Something undoubtedly is going to happen tonight and it probably won't rebound to the referee's credit. Altogether, I'd say that the selected official might do better if he lost his way to the arena and didn't quite make it.

The man might be Gunboat Smith because of his size but that gentleman no longer is in great favor with the commission. My guess, in fact, is that the nominee will be a man, picked largely because Ancil Hoffman, of the Baer camp, has objected to him, namely Arthur Donovan, son of old Mike, which is all right. I don't think Mike had a marcel.

Until he contracted a cold on

Sunday, Carnera looked the part of a natural, with his size, his boxing ability, his condition and the fact that he has fought three times since Baer fought once. The latter not only has been out a year but has spent most of it with his feet under a night club table. He has, in fact, played high in Hollywood and on Broadway but he must be in better than fair shape now; he can punch and don't for a moment let his buffoonery deceive you. When the time comes, all that banter of his runs down the middle of Main street and he's simply out for no good.

MUST WIN EARLY

Be that as it might, it would seem that he'll have to win in the early rounds or not at all. This Carnera often makes the mistake of punching with a punching fighter, particularly when hit, but if he can settle down into stride, he'll just be too hard to beat. While he's settling, however, Mr. Baer may nail him, even as he nailed Schmeling. It wouldn't be surprising if both were staggered right under the opening bell.

If that happens to Carnera, he may miss the more or less expert services of his chief second, Mr. Will Duffy, who has been unfortunately detained out of town. Mr. Duffy's place, they hope, to appoint Dan Morgan, an old line boxing man who knows more than Mr. Duffy can ever hope to acquire, except Mr. Duffy's genius for publicizing himself. He is supposed to have influenced the result of the Dempsey-Sharkey fight by shouting to the hesitant referee in stentorian tones, "count that man!" But with the clamor and uproar of the moment, I doubt if Mr. Duffy would have been able to attract attention if he shot off a cannon. Nevertheless, Carnera is used to him, much, I suspect, as one becomes attached to an old plug hat.

But that's all so much surmise at a time when activity impends. The time is set, 9 o'clock tonight (Circleville time): the crowd is ready, the principals are on the scene, Carnera having arrived this morning while Baer came in from camp last night. They will weigh in this afternoon at two o'clock, an empty gesture in a heavy-weight fight but apparently a necessary one.

Briefly, the big moment is at hand. The stage is set. Curtain!

MECCA SCORES 2 IN EIGHTH TO WIN GAME

Rally Comes After Circle City Dairy Leads Through Seven Innings.

Scoring two runs in their half of the eighth inning on three hits and a wild throw the Mecca restaurant pulled a hard-fought game from the fire, Wednesday evening, defeating the Circle City dairy, 4-3.

The Mecca retains its perfect standing in the league and meets the Container Corporation team next Tuesday for the championship of the first half.

The Mecca trailed through seven innings of the ball game with the Dairy men scoring two runs in the first and one in the second. The Mecca counted two in the third but was blanked in every other frame until the eighth came along.

The Circle City runs in the first inning were scored on clean blows by Mancini, Butler and Eldridge with one of the runs scoring as Maloney grounded out.

The second inning run came when E. Imler singled and was forced, Leasure getting to first. He advanced on Elliott's grounder and scored on Mancini's second hit.

The two Mecca runs in the third were counted on a hit by E. Radcliff who was forced by B. Radcliff. Then followed hits by Davis and Hegele to account for the runs.

LEASURE IN FORM

The Mecca had a runner left on base in the fourth inning, two (a, the fifth and two in the sixth but Lloyd Leasure, who pitched the best game of his career, put on the skids and with the aid of good support stopped scoring attempts.

Then came the eighth, Hegele singled and did Kline, Hegele going to third on the latter blow and Kline taking second on the throw to third. Mettler grounded out, Imler to Baucher, Hegele scoring and Kline also scored with what proved to be the winning run when Baucher threw the ball away trying to get the runner off third base.

Gordon flied out and Hickey singled but the inning was ended without further trouble.

The Circle City threatened in the ninth when Elliott was safe at first on Davis' low throw. He was forced by Mancini and Butler and Maloney were easy outs.

Davis and Gordon were hitting stars for the winners each getting three. Mancini and E. Imler each had two blows for the losers.

Umpires were J. Dade, M. Moore and Sheltman.

Tonight the Given Oils and McClaren Meats tangle.

to assist the local communities.

The budget for the city's schools submitted last August for 1934 was $78,309.35. It will be necessary to cut it considerably for 1935 as a result of the mill reduction on real estate, Mr. Krinn said today.

In explaining that no salary contracts will be offered city teachers until the fall, Mr. May said that the "board wished to be sure of itself and not suffer an embarrassment as a result of miscalculation."

BUDGET STUDIED

On or before July 15, the board must submit its 1935 budget to Deputy Auditor Krinn, who draws up a budget for the county for submission to the county commissioners.

Money secured from the June collection of taxes distributed in the fall usually runs the schools through January and sometimes longer. After January, funds received from the collection of the personal, tangible and classified taxes add to the school treasury. These, however, are not expected to yield enough to operate the schools for a nine-month term.

Mr. Krinn does not believe that the schools will be able to operate nine months if some outside help is not furnished.

In Columbus, state education department officials say that "the Ohio school situation now is the blackest in history," pointing out that the transition from the 15-mill limitation to the 10-mill makes it most critical.

OTHERS LISTED

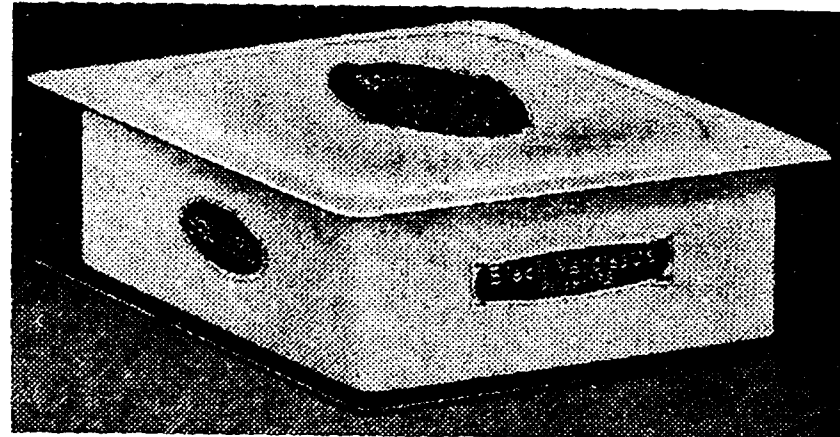

Besides Circleville, among the cities planning to open their schools without any definite length of school term specified, and without any salary contracts for teachers, are Portsmouth, Jackson, Nelsonville, Hillsboro, Marysville, Coshocton and New Lexington.

Schools planning to open on a "month-by-month" basis include Bexley, Chillicothe, Washington C. H., and Wilmington.

Mansfield has been cited by state officials as one of the cities whose schools are assured of operating no more than five months. Athens and Wooster will open on a four-month basis, while Belleaire will put its teachers to work on "courtesy contracts," which state what salary will be paid "if and when" the schools operate.

WOODS SHOW HERE FRIDAY

Two Performances Scheduled
For Unique Presentation;
Acts Lauded.

When the all new Bryan Woods circus visits Circleville on Friday, June 15, amusement lovers will see a novel presentation of tented recreation. None other than Ohio's well known circus man, John G. Robinson the Third, early this spring in Miami, Fla., described the Bryan Woods show as "The only really new idea in circus business in 50 years."

And that is why the Bryan Woods shows have come to be known as "The only show of its kind in America." A self cooling tent that need hold no terror for circus fans on the hottest of days is one of the novel features. For those who visit the circus in the evening, the best lighted circus performance ever offered is promised, one which aside from the usual overhead lights every nook and corner of the big tent is reached by searching spot lights.

But the circus performance itself is what will most interest the majority, and in this respect it is almost needless to say that every branch of the circus that has become orthodox is represented in the program, which includes leapers, acrobats, tumblers, wire walkers, bareback riders, high divers, a loop-the-loop in an automobile, funny clown turns for the children, and the grown-ups who chaperon them, trapeze performers, and all the usual, and many unusual circus turns.

Miss Billie Woods, best known of the world's lady trainers of simians, directs the activities of a half hundred monkeys, apes, baboons and chimpanzees, while another well known animal trainer, Miss Dorothy Lewis, has charge of a division made up of dogs and ponies.

Two performances will be given, rain or shine, at 2:15 and 8:15 p. m.

HOLLYWOOD COMES TO THE CLIFTONA FRIDAY, THIS WEEK

Hollywood is coming to Circleville!

Although that may sound like a broad statement, it is, save for perhaps slight exaggeration, the truth, for on Friday, June 15, the far famed Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Traveling Motion Picture Studio will pay the Cliftona theatre a brief visit.

This traveling studio, which was designed and constructed to special specifications at a cost of $150,000, is literally a miniature Hollywood on wheels; what with its elaborate motion picture sound equipment, its cameras, and its expert crew of camera and sound men from the famous Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios in California.

Facilities for both the taking and the projection of talking motion pictures are included aboard the studio, and realizing that the general public would be greatly interested in having an opportunity to inspect this equipment, it is announced that during the studio's visit here this will be permitted.

The studio, which is hauled by a gigantic trackless locomotive, truly an amazing sight in itself, is regarded as one of the most remarkable and noteworthy achievements in engineering yet attempted successfully by the resourceful mind of man. Everywhere the studio travels it is referred to as the "Eighth Wonder of the World."

STUDEBAKERS IN FLEET

The M-G-M traveling motion picture studio which will arrive in Circleville at 1:30 tomorrow afternoon and open to the public for inspection from that time until 3 p. m. is equipped entirely with Studebaker automobiles, according to G. L. Schiear, local Studebaker dealer. The studio is a trailer attached to a specially constructed auto, resembling a locomotive engine, but powered by a Studebaker motor.

All other cars in the caravan are also products of the Studebaker Corporation and a special feature will be an 85 per cent stock Studebaker which performed in the Memorial Day races at Indianapolis. The racing car is being piloted by David R. Osborne, Junior.

TRACKLESS TRAIN IN CITY FRIDAY

Something unusual in the way of vehicles, a trackless train comprised of a locomotive and passenger coach, is scheduled to visit Circleville, Friday, June 15. It was announced today by H. B. Given, local United States tire dealer.

"This unusual mode of transportation is well worth inspecting. In addition to possessing the fascinating features of a giant monster of the rails, it is also equipped with broadcasting apparatus over which several broadcasts will be made.

"Several years ago the first trackless train was built for the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Motion Picture Company which sent it on a world tour. The tour was so successful and the train aroused so much attention that a second train was built recently by the same company.

"As a result of the satisfactory service which United States tires gave during the tour of the first trackless train, they are being used exclusively in the current tour by the second train. Fourteen U. S. Royal Shock Ply casings with Puncture Sealing Tubes are used. (The locomotive requires size 34x7 and the coach 32x6.)"

CHAPTER FORTY-SEVEN

"I think I'll go and see Dr. Baker, Val, you know, the doctor we had for John Harmon. I think I'll go tonight—he has office hours every evening."

Stanley slid off the bed, stood up a bit shakily. It was still hot in the room but the sunlight had been blotted out by a thick, warm dusk.

Valerie accepted this casually but later she said: "Want me to go with you, darling, for moral support and what-not?"

Stanley was drawing a lipstick carefully across her mouth. Now she rubbed her lips gently, shook her head. "No, thanks, Val. I'll be all right. It's just around the corner in an apartment hotel. I went there one night for some medicine."

After she had gone, Valerie sat for a long time in the wing chair frowning thoughtfully. She had not forced any confidences but she thought she knew pretty well what had happened to Stanley in the past three weeks. She wished that John Harmon was home, that Drew Armitage had never left Chicago and that Perry had not gone off to Canada on his annual fishing trip. She felt that Perry would have helped tremendously just then; that he would have made certain things seem much less unbearable, the weather, for instance, and the look that had been in Stanley's eyes just now, and the stillness and heartache she had somehow managed to leave behind her in this old room.

A nurse admitted Stanley and took her name and address and said that the doctor would see her in just a few minutes. Then she left her and went back through a white paneled door.

The room was small but miraculously cool. There were slim maple chairs and one or two deeper, cushioned chairs, and a maple table with a gay litter of magazines. There was a faint smell of ether and antiseptics and a general air of well-ordered expectancy about the place. Stanley found herself thinking that in this pleasant, calm atmosphere nothing seemed so very bad. She might have been waiting for a manicure or a facial or something equally unimportant. She picked up a New Yorker and turned its pages—hats were wearing brims again, enchanting ones, this season; there was a new perfume "as intriguing and mysterious as moonlight"; gloves were going to be very important, soft, wrinkled, suede gloves.

Her hands were trembling so that the magazine shook ridiculously. She put it back on the table, sat staring at the closed white door. She tried to think about casual, impersonal things; whether the doctor was really busy or was just having his dinner or was perhaps finishing a good detective story. She remembered him as being a young man with friendly eyes and a pleasant, informal manner. He and John Harmon had got on splendidly. He had been interested in John Harmon's novel, had said he would bring a copy around to be autographed.

For a moment she wondered a bit apprehensively if it mightn't have been better to have gone to a stranger—someone to whom she would have been just a name—but she dismissed this almost at once. He had had friendly brown eyes and had laughed a lot; had been efficient without appearing to be. He would know exactly what to do and would make it all seem not too important—as he had made John Harmon's temperature and the frightening way in which he had raved deliciously seem not too important.

The nurse came back most unexpectedly, and the next minute Stanley had gone through the white door and was shaking hands with Dr. Baker.

He was glad to see her. He told her so and asked about John Harmon. She told him John Harmon was abroad. He was delighted. And then, putting her in a deep chair opposite him, he sat down at his desk, the nurse went out, closing the door softly behind her, and he said to Stanley, in the same wholly unprofessional tone that somehow contrived at the same time to be a bit different than it had been before: "And what can I do for you, Mrs. Northrup?"

Stanley looked at him and locked her hands together tightly and moistened her lips. "I think I am going to have a baby."

His smile which had been a bit tentative, became at once expansive. "Fine. That's the best piece of news I ever hear in this office. We'll have to take good care of you now, until that clever husband of yours returns."

Stanley stared at him, twisted her fingers together, opened her lips to speak. But he was asking her questions, brief, rather simple questions. She answered them mechanically.

He rang for the nurse and said something about an "examination."

When it was over and she had come back again to the deep chair, he smiled at her reassuringly. "Everything's fine, Mrs. Northrup. Not a thing in the world to worry about. Now just forget all about it for, say a month, then come back and see me again. If you could get away from the city for a while it might do you good. A change is sometimes the best cure for the morning nausea, but that will pass away, in a few weeks more—you're probably through the worst of it now. And if there's anything you want in the meantime, just call me up or come in and see me."

"But, doctor—" Stanley wasn't just sure what she was going to say. Nothing much, she thought, somehow, everything seemed to be settled all at once.

But he interpreted her half-formed question from force of habit. "There will be plenty of time to settle details later—in hospital, nurse, all that sort of thing—it's hard to be definite so early about these things, but I should say we can safely count on your being confined in December. The thing for you to do now is forget all about it and just take care of yourself. Later on you can get excited about the baby. Right now I want you to forget it and think of yourself."

She smiled because he expected her to, shook hands with him and followed the nurse out.

The nurse shook hands with her too, and smiled at her. "I'm sure you're going to be fine, Mrs. Northrup, and you'll feel much better in another month. They say the second month's always the worst. And Dr. Baker will take fine care of you—he's wonderful with confinement cases. I tell him he ought to specialize in them."

Stanley went down in the elevator and walked out of the apartment building and started home. She was going to have a baby. There was no longer any question about that. She was going to have a baby. Dr. Baker had taken it for granted and the nurse had taken it for granted. Stanley found that she, too, was accepting it; calmly, without rebellion, with, indeed, a rather pleasant sense of inevitability. She walked rapidly and easily with a nice feeling of release from physical pain. Her head no longer ached, she was, in fact, not conscious of her body at all. Something was happening to her; a numbness was slipping away from her. She no longer felt empty, apathetic, bereft of every vital impulse.

In the time it took her to leave the doctor's office and walk two blocks through a soft, hot dark night she discovered that somehow she had come back from a meaningless void into a world of pulsing, fierce reality.

She saw things all at once with an amazing clarity. It was as if she had been staring into a pool of stagnant, clouded water, in which nothing was capable of reflection, and then miraculously the water had cleared, had become smooth and limpid and shining, with simple, clean-cut reflections. She saw herself, suddenly and irrevocably, as Stanley Northrup, not as Stanley Paige who had desired Drew Armitage and, lacking the courage of her desires, had sent him away, not as Stanley Paige who had loved John Harmon and married him and then forgotten him so completely—but as Stanley Northrup, a very real and not particularly romantic person who was going to have a baby—and there was something supremely ridiculous and absurd in the idea that she could ever have forgotten John Harmon—a person who was going to have a baby did not think of another man, most certainly did not forget the man whose baby she was going to have. She didn't know exactly why this was so, she didn't care particularly; that it was so was all that mattered and that mattered tremendously.

And that it was so simplified things amazingly. There was no longer any question of her wanting Drew—Drew belonged very definitely to a slender, ardent-eyed, trembling-tipped girl who had lived in a fool's paradise and had never even thought of having a baby; there was no longer any question of her not wanting John Harmon—John Harmon was all that really mattered in the past, he was what so utterly emphasized the future. He was what so completely accentuated the present, only, curiously enough, there were two of him. Now—one, ridiculously tall and thin and rumpled-headed, the other ridiculously small and round and rumpled-headed.

Stanley had reached her own block. Now she quickened her walk, ran up the steps of the house and turned the key in her own door. Then she remembered suddenly that babies weren't supposed to have much hair—not at first, anyway. She pushed open the door, found Valerie still curled up in the wing chair, told her in a breathless, rather hushed voice: "I'm quite sure my baby will have hair, Val—soft, rumply, brown hair."

A few nights later Perry, back from his fishing trip, dropped in at the house on Ninth Street. He found Valerie clad in her scarlet pajamas, her hair clinging in damp little rings about her forehead; her hands covered with soap suds.

"Stanley's not here," she told him, emerging from the bathroom. "And I'm in the midst of the family wash, but I'll be finished in a second if you want to wait."

Perry wanted to wait. He slung his hat onto a convenient table and sat down on the divan and lighted a cigarette. A faint breeze drifted in through the open windows and stirred the chintz curtains and the leaves of the primroses and potted geraniums. The night was warm and fragrant with the promise of rain—tender, springlike rain—and somewhere a hurdy-gurdy jangled a wistful, thin little tune.

"Where's Stanley?" he asked, tipping his head back, lifting his voice above the noise of running water in the bathroom.

"She's gone over to Newark. She said if you showed up to tell you that she had gone to see Ellen—that you would know who Ellen was." Valerie appeared again, drying her hands on a Turkish towel. She curled up on the other end of the divan. In the soft glow of the yellow-shaded lamp she looked slim and young and a little tired and entirely lovely.

Painful Neuralgia Due To Nerve Inflammation

If Neglected There Is Danger That This Condition May Become Chronic, Says Authority

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health,
New York City

"TRIGEMINAL NEURALGIA," or neuralgia of the face, as it is more commonly called, is an extremely painful and annoying affliction. The symptoms are due to an inflammation or other disturbance of the trigeminal nerves.

Dr. Copeland

The French call this condition "le douloureux," which means "agonizing twinge." I am confident that every sufferer from trigeminal neuralgia will agree that the French description is very precise.

There are two trigeminal nerves, one on each side of the face. When these nerves become inflamed, pain may be so severe as to require for its relief opiates or other strong sedatives.

As a rule the victim first complains of pain in the face, or earache. The pain "comes and goes," but with each new attack it becomes more severe and even agonizing. Any pain located in the face that is throbbing or shooting in character and which is felt intermittently, should arouse suspicion of trigeminal neuralgia.

Should Not Be Neglected

It should never be overlooked for if allowed to become chronic, cure is difficult. For many years little relief could be offered to victims of this disturbance. The disease was not understood and many unconfirmed opinions were given as to the cause and possible cure. I am glad to say that sufferers from this affliction can now obtain relief and may even hope for a definite cure.

In most instances the disturbance can be traced to an infection somewhere in the body. For example, diseased teeth, nasal sinuses or tonsils, disease of the gall bladder or other part of the digestive tract, may be the underlying cause. When the original trouble is corrected and all centers of infection are removed, the attacks are lessened in number and severity and in many instances complete relief is obtained.

"Injection Treatment"

Within recent years a new method has been devised for the relief of severe cases of trigeminal neuralgia. I refer to the so-called "injection treatment." Alcohol or another chemical is injected into the involved nerve. This leads to a numbness of the diseased nerve and the disappearance of the unbearable pain.

Of course, only the attending physician can determine whether this is the correct treatment. Such measures are unnecessary when focal points of infection are removed. If you are a sufferer from trigeminal neuralgia I urge you to consult with your physician. Perhaps he will advise an X-ray examination of the teeth and nasal sinuses. If they are diseased proper measures will be taken for the removal of pus and infection.

In addition, he will give attention to the digestive tract. Faulty elimination must be corrected before permanent relief can be expected. To this end diet is of the greatest importance.

Answers to Health Queries

A. W. H. Q.—What causes excessive perspiration of the hands and feet?

A.—Excessive perspiration is due to nerve stimulation. For full particulars restate your question and send a stamped, self-addressed envelope. (Copyright, 1934, E. F. S., Inc.)

MOVIES

AT THE CLIFTONA

Telling the intimate story of the life of a world famous dancer, George Raft's latest starring picture for Paramount, "Bolero," comes on Friday and Saturday to the Cliftona Theatre. The picture, directed by Wesley Ruggles, features Carole Lombard, Sally Rand, the Fan Dancer, and Frances Drake.

It reveals the long struggle for success by an ambitious youth, who finally achieves fame only by denying his emotions, by trampling on the hearts of the beautiful women who help him on his way to the top.

George Raft, who himself, was an internationally famous dancer before he came to the screen, plays the lead. In the supporting cast are the blonde beauty of Carole Lombard, as the only woman he loves, Sally Rand, whose startling fan-dance is recorded in the picture, Frances Drake, as one of his partners, and William Frawley, who plays the role of his brother-manager.

STEEL STRIFE

issued by leaders of the steel industry revealed today.

During an all-day session of the executive committee of the American Iron and Steel Institute, the committee consolidated returns from elections held by employees since the strike issue was raised.

85 PER CENT OPPOSED

The compilations showed that of 213,044 employees eligible to vote in 34 steel plants, ballots were cast by 181,926 or 85.39 per cent.

GARY, Ind., June 14.—A compromise proposal that may avert the threatened steel strike in the Calumet district here was being borne to the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers convention at Pittsburgh today.

Before departing by airplane for the convention Roy A. Kelsey, secretary of the union's fourth district, declared:

"We think we have terms which might be acceptable to both the union and to the industry."

WASHINGTON, June 14.—Administration leaders in Congress today sought an agreement for immediate enactment of President Roosevelt's new labor bill in order to use its conciliating features to avert a strike in the steel industry.

While delegates of the steel workers union met in Pittsburgh to vote on a general strike, the Republican membership of the Senate met in party conference to chart their course on the bill. The administration plans to secure Senate approval of the measure before sending it to the House.

The bill would:

1. Empower the President to appoint boards to investigate labor disputes and encourage their settlement. The actual settlement however would be left to direct negotiations between employers and employees.

2. Direct these boards to conduct secret elections among employees in any industry either on the issue of organization or for the choice of representatives in collective bargaining, as defined in section 7-A of the National Recovery Act.

3. Impose a fine of $1,000 or a year's imprisonment on any person violating any rule laid down by the conciliation boards or interfering with their operations.
